ABSTRACT

The tabular data in this report on New York City's Puerto Rican population and households comes from the 1980 Census. It is noted that all data in the report must be considered preliminary pending the final outcome of litigation over a possible population undercount. Population information is provided by age, sex, and marital status. Household information is provided in terms of household type; household composition by age, sex, marital status, and relationship; and homeownership and rental status. (CMG)

DECEMBER 1982

In August 1980, the State of New York, the City of New York, and other plaintiffs filed suit against the United States Bureau of the Census and other defendants claiming that the Bureau had undercounted the population of the State and the City in the 1980 Decennial Census. The Federal District Court held that the State and the City in fact had been disproportionately undercounted and ordered the Bureau to use reasonable methods, which the Court held were available, to adjust the 1980 population figures for the State and City to compensate for the disproportionate undercount. The Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit reversed the District Court's order on procedural grounds and remanded the case to the District Court for further proceedings. All 1980 Census data that we discuss in this report must be considered preliminary pending the final outcome of the litigation. Conclusions drawn from this and other Bureau data are subject to the qualification that they do not take undercounting into consideration.
